

WILL NEW LENOX BECOME AIR BASE?

FRANKFORT GIRL IS A PRETTY AUTUMN BRIDE

Very impressive was the wedding of Miss Annabelle Deist, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emil C. Deist of Frankfort, and Stanley R. Williams, son of Mrs. C. M. Wieber of Lincoln Estates on Sunday October 6th at 3:30 o'clock in the Frankfort Evangelical and Reformed church. The pastor, Rev. G. Gerhold officiated.

The altar, which was decorated for the Fall Festival, made a lovely setting. As the guests were assembling, Mr. Glenn Voss at the organ played appropriate music. He also played the wedding march and accompanied Mr. Arthur Lambrecht when he sang, "At Dawning" and "Because".

The bride who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin, beaded with pearls and a long train. Her long veil was of lace and tulle. She also wore a mother of pearl locket, a gift from the groom. Her bouquet was Johanna Hill roses and Baby's breath.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Oran Deist, sister-in-law of the bride, was gowned in deep peach satin and carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses.

Miss Marietta Rahm, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor and wore peacock green satin and carried Talisman roses.

Ethel Mae Wieber, little sister of the groom was flower girl and wore a gown of peach silk trimmed with green and carried a basket of colored rose petals.

Harold Williams, brother of the groom and Oran Deist were best men and Kenneth Oetler of Frankfort and Richard Sippel of Mokena were ushers.

The bride's mother wore soldier blue crepe and the groom's mother wore black crepe. Each had a corsage of gladioli florets.

Immediately following the service, a wedding supper was served to a hundred guests in the church parlors. The tables were decorated in the bride's colors, peach and green. A large tiered wedding cake graced the bridal table. Later in the evening, a reception was held in the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams will make their home with the bride's parents.

Former Operator Goes On Trial

Frank D. Huser, former telegraph operator at Mokena, was identified Tuesday by Mrs. Ogden Wright as the man who shot and wounded her in her home May 15 when she refused to marry him. Huser is on trial on a charge of assault with intent to kill, before a jury in the Criminal court of Judge Julius H. Miner in Chicago.

Mrs. Wright, formerly Miss Shirley Melgard, daughter of Al Melgard, Chicago Stadium organist, testified she had kept company with Huser for two years. She said he gave her an engagement ring, which she returned later.

She said Huser telephoned her on the night of the shooting, and she told him she was going to marry Wright. Huser awakened her later in her bedroom, she said, and fired a shot which struck her nose. She said a street light shining into her room enabled her to recognize him. After her recovery, she married Wright and now lives in Washington D. C. Huser who is 42, lives at 6613 Normal Blvd.

Rumor Causes Excitement

New Lenox has been quite excited the past week over the report that the government is thinking of acquiring 17,000 acres in and around New Lenox for an air base site and for the location of underground hangars. According to the story the airbase would serve as a protection for the munition plant at Wilmington. It is also reported that an army tank factory might also be located here. Just how much credence can be placed in the rumor is hard to say.

Army planes were seen flying over New Lenox last Saturday and army men have been taking pictures of the land north of New Lenox along Francis road and south of New Lenox.

Other stories have it that the government is considering acquiring 220,000 acres in Will County.

Intensive Preparations by Army Insure Proper Accommodations for Conscripts

by FRANK M. DAVIS

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
WASHINGTON, D. C.—Adequacy in the provision of shelter, hospital, and sanitation facilities is the keynote in army preparations for the induction of selectees made available for military service by the Burke-Wadsworth Act.

Both the National Guard and the selective service inductees will be brought into the federal service by increments, in order that full preparations may be made prior to their induction. By the time any particular group is brought in, all necessary construction will have been completed and adequate facilities provided to insure healthful and comfortable living conditions.

This principle will apply particularly in regard to clothing and hospital equipment. The present War Department procurement objectives will also insure a sufficient amount of material so that the training of the new troops can be conducted on the latest and most modern equipment.

The selective service system of mobilizing the manpower of the nation in case of an emergency has been a subject of continuous study since the last war. The idea of selective service which was put into effect at that time proved to be sound, and since then all plans have been devoted to smoothing out the wrinkles and making minor improvements in the system.

The procurement of the manpower authorized by the Burke-Wadsworth act is under the control of the director of selective service appointed by the President. The director has established a national headquarters and works through the governors of the states, who have appointed local boards composed of civilians—one board for approximately every 30,000 people. These local boards are charged primarily with the classification and examination of registrants as to availability for service. It is felt that members of such boards who are familiar with local conditions, who, in fact, are neighbors of the registrants, are much better qualified than any other agency to classify and judge the individuals who should be selected as the representatives of their communities in the army. The knowledge which the members of these boards have of each individual's status as to dependents, his work or profession, and his health, will go far toward insuring a fair and democratic operation of the system.

Army Requisitions States.

The army first exercises direct influence under the selective service act in requisitioning the various states for quotas of men to fill necessary military requirements as determined by the war department.

When a local board has been called upon by the state in which it is located to furnish a quota of selectees upon a certain date, the Officers Attend Classification Course

WASHINGTON. — To insure the possibilities of a soldier conscripted into the United States army being assigned duties for which he is best qualified by previous experience, the war department is completing a special course conducted for 48 selected regular army and reserve officers.

The classification system will follow the soldier throughout his military service so that, when he re-

A typical army camp to which neophyte-soldiers may be assigned is Camp Dix, N. J., pictured above, which was a training base during the World war. Extensive construction work is being carried on in this and similar army camps throughout the country so that facilities for housing the conscripts will be adequate when the influx begins. board will fill the quota by calling and assembling the necessary number of registrants in the order that their registration numbers are drawn by lot in Washington—provided, of course, that the men have been classified as available for immediate military service. The local board will give each man a physical examination and will accept for immediate service only those who are physically fit.

Before they are assigned to army units, the selectees will go through a careful sorting and selecting process. During the World war, before the problem of sorting manpower was solved, considerable time and effort were wasted because men were not properly distributed among the units in accordance with their military qualifications. For instance, one division was disrupted as many as four times by the transfer of men of certain qualifications to other organizations. The confusion and loss of time caused by failure to sort out personnel before assignment during the last war has caused the attachment of considerable importance to this phase of induction at the present time. Under the selective service act, a heterogeneous assortment of manpower will be received by the army. The accomplishment of the sorting process before the assignment of the men to organizations will lift a great burden from the tactical units which are concerned primarily with training. Consequently, the local board will send the group of selectees it has assembled, not to an army training camp, but to an induction station.

Induction Stations Important.

The basic purpose of an induction station is to give a detailed physical examination to the selectees; formally induct them into the military service, and then pass them on to the reception center. The induction stations will perform functions similar to those of the ordinary recruiting stations, and they will be so located as to expedite the processing of the selectees. Approximately 100 of these stations are distributed throughout the United States. It is planned to pass the selectees through the induction stations and on to the reception centers the same day that they arrive. If they arrive late in the afternoon, they will be kept overnight. If the induction station is located in a city, they will be cared for either at the station, or will be lodged in armories or hotels. If any of the men are found to be disqualified by physical defects at the thorough examination which will be given at the induction station, they will be furnished transportation back to their home towns at that time.

When they arrive at the reception centers, the selectees will have their first real contacts with the army. Their records will be completed, uniforms will be issued, an opportunity given to obtain government insurance policies, vaccinations and inoculations will be administered, and the men will be carefully sorted and classified for their first assignments in the army. Each man will be given a general classification test and will then be interviewed by an officer to determine the military duty to which he is best adapted. Information will be obtained as to the man's age, birthplace, home, parents, dependents, and education. It will be ascertained what foreign languages he speaks, if any; it will be determined what work he has done in civil life; and what previous military experience he may have had. If he appears to have been a trained specialist in some branch of a civil trade, that fact will be noted. He will be given an opportunity to express his choice in athletics, hobbies, and the nature of service he desires. This information will give a clear picture of the man's suitability for any particular military assignment.

The officers assembled for the classification course were already specialists in this work. They have now been distributed throughout the army to supervise all classification activities.

Remain Three Days.

The selectees will remain at the reception center only long enough to be sorted and classified, which, it is anticipated, will require on an average, two or three days.

There are two possible systems by which the selectees might be trained by the already existing units. One would be to distribute them at once throughout the various small organizations; companies, batteries, etc., and have them absorb the fundamentals, working side by side with the older men. The other system would be to segregate them more or less under centralized control while they are put through the intensive period of training in the fundamentals under the supervision of specially qualified instructors. The war department has made a careful study of the matter particularly in the light of the developments of the present European war, and has decided that the latter method—that is, keeping them together until they are thoroughly trained in the fundamentals—is far superior.

Compared to School.

The training phases which these men will pass through might be compared to the grade school, high school, and college periods through which the majority of American youths pass. For 13 weeks after joining his organization, the selectee will—in a military sense—be in the grade school phase. The training he will receive is designed to harden him gradually without making severe physical demands at first, but developing eventually the ability to endure prolonged and arduous physical exertion. He will be taught to march, use his weapons, and care for himself and his means of transportation in the field. Tactical exercises will be limited to those of the platoon and company. At the end of this period, the selectee should be thoroughly versed in the fundamentals of the soldier and should be in prime physical condition.

The so-called high school phase will be devoted to battalion training, which will call for the combined use of the different weapons and equipment found in the battalion. It is only when the battalions are well-trained that the selectees will pass on to what has been spoken of as a college course and participate in regimental exercises and in maneuvers involving the co-ordinated use of the combined arms.

Not only is it intended to turn out well-trained soldiers, but it is expected to improve the men who come under army supervision, physically, mentally, and morally. Judging from past experience, the majority of the selectees will thrive on the army diet and they will enjoy working, playing, and living with men from all walks of life, who, like themselves, are known to be strong, healthy, and intelligent, while the well-regulated life which they will lead in the army will give them ideas of promptness, neatness, and teamwork.

Opposing groups criticize embargo on scrap iron and steel to Japan . . . Friction in Republican ranks not indicated by Hamilton's activities.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—To a good many observers it appears that the embargo on scrap iron and steel to Japan is locking the stable door after the horses are out.

There are two groups who criticize this policy of kicking Japan in the face. One group is all in favor of it—all in favor of doing everything possible to prevent Japan from conquering China, expanding in the Dutch East Indies or French Indo-China. The criticism of those holding this view is that the embargo ought to have been imposed two years ago.

Those sharing this view also contend, of course, that the moment the policy was decided upon this country should have begun preparing to fight in case Japan resented our policy in the Far East enough to make trouble.

QUESTION DEBATEABLE

The other group of critics think the whole situation in Asia is none of our business—that we have been trying to get out of the Philippines for years BECAUSE we did not want the possibility of becoming involved in a war in that part of the world—and that we should not have been making faces at Japan.

Which one of these groups is right is a debatable question. Most of us have positive views one way or the other, and it is very difficult for those taking one of the sides to understand the logic of the folks who take the other.

But there is very little difference of opinion that the administration would have been wise if it had been guided by the logic of one or the other of these groups.

CLAMOR FOR EMBARGO

Very few men in Washington, if talking confidentially, will not admit that either the administration ought to have steered a neutral course all the way through, or else been more effective in pursuing a hostile course.

There has been clamor from a considerable section of the public ever since the Japanese attack on China began, more than two years ago, for this country to embargo scrap iron or anything else that would help the Nippon war machine. This clamor did not get very far because most people, whether they sympathized with it or not, did not dream the United States would take any formal action.

But beginning with the warning of Secretary of State Cordell Hull about the Dutch East Indies, there has been incident after incident calculated to make bad feelings between Japan and the U. S., finally culminating in the very step that was advocated by the pro-Chinese in this country two years ago.

HAMILTON HELPS G. O. P.

John D. M. Hamilton, who was relegated to second place in the Republican national committee after the Philadelphia convention, has been doing yeoman service in his efforts to get all of the defeated aspirants for the Republican nomination on the firing line for Wendell Willkie.

He and Dudley White, the chairman of the Republican speakers' bureau, have begun announcing speaking schedules of the big guns of the party, and have already lined up men who might be termed the leaders of the various groups within the party.

The speakers range from the extreme isolationist leaders to the extremists who believe in going even further than President Roosevelt in giving aid to Britain.

The importance of this oratorical and air barrage, of course, is that it tends to dissipate the gossip about certain leaders sulking in their tents. It creates the appearance of harmony.

The fact that this big job was done, and announced by John Hamilton, is significant. It is calculated to stop a lot of the talk about friction inside the Republican organization.

RUMORS OF FRICTION

There has been plenty of talk, and plenty of articles by political writers, that all was not sweetness and light between the Willkie train and either the Chicago, New York or Washington headquarters.

Most of these stories actually come from what political reporters in the various state capitals gather from their friends in the regular state organizations. Incidentally, there seems to be little doubt that, up until very recently, at any rate, no one in the national Republican organization has been doing very much to reassure the disgruntled.

The situation is this. The "regulars" in the various states are worried over what they hear about the crowd of "amateurs" around Willkie. What they are afraid of, of course, is that after Willkie is elected these amateurs will be the fair-haired boys around the White House, while the regulars will be left out in the cold.

Early Care of Great Aid in Mental Cases

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

ONE of the great helps to health of today is the periodic examination given free to policyholders by insurance companies. Any defect is discovered early and whether it be serious or slight the knowledge that it is present enables the individual to have it corrected in most cases or enables him to live safely despite the defect.

The day is about at hand when insurance examiners and other physicians will take note of early mental symptoms just as they do of physical symptoms and many early mental patients will never need to enter a mental institution for treatment.

Today it is recognized that mental symptoms can be due to heredity, surrounding circumstances, infection and other conditions. Doctors Carney Landis, Columbia university, and James D. Page, University of Rochester, in their book, "Modern Society and Mental Disease" state that in the United States there are 60,000 patients undergoing treatment in mental institutions and their figures show that at least one person out of every 20 will become a mental hospital patient at some time.

While the above are startling figures it is reassuring to remember that of every 10 patients entering a mental hospital at least six are cured and able to return to work. It has been found that whether the treatment given these mental patients is of the usual type—rest, some occupation and some straightening out of the tangled skein in their minds by careful questioning and answering—or whether of the new type of putting the patient under insulin or metrazol shock, the best results are obtained the earlier the treatment is given.

Another point in keeping with the apparent increase in heart disease, apoplexy and cancer is that the increase in mental disease is due to a considerable extent to the fact that more people are living longer today than in any previous period.

Fat Foods Good For Epileptics

I HAD a patient suffering with epilepsy whom I kept free of attacks by washing out his stomach twice each week. He did not have a single attack during the many months of this treatment. He was transferred to another city, stopped the treatment, and again had his epileptic attacks. Naturally I felt that the digestive apparatus—liver or stomach—had something to do with the cause of epilepsy, so was not surprised when research workers discovered that the ketogenic diet—poor in starch foods and rich in fat foods—was of help in preventing attacks of epilepsy.

Dr. H. M. Keith, Montreal, in the Canadian Medical Association Journal says that ketogenic diet, producing large amounts of diacetic acid in the urine, is a satisfactory method of treating epilepsy.

Dr. Keith has treated 160 patients satisfactorily over a period of from one to nine years. Of these, 36 per cent remained entirely free of attacks of any type so far as is known to themselves or to their parents; 21 per cent were improved, having only an occasional attack; 43 per cent were not benefited, although they carried out instructions fully. Therefore with the ketogenic diet alone, one-third of the epileptic children can be made free from attacks, and from 50 to 60 per cent can be improved.

Diet Control Necessary.

A ketogenic diet, to be effective, must be rigidly controlled and should be a weighed diet. It is necessary that in the diet the proportion of the fats to the starches should be three of fat foods (butter, cream, egg yolks) to one of starches (bread, potatoes, sugar) instead of the diet for normal individuals which is just the opposite, that is one of fat foods to three (or four) of starch foods.

Dr. Keith points out also the necessity for healthy outdoor exercise, and sufficient rest.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Are extracts of liver as effective as liver itself for anaemia?

A.—Yes.

Q.—What is the cause of white marks on the fingernails of a 13-year-old boy whose general health is good?

A.—Skin specialists tell us that these lines usually follow an illness and may be due to lack of lime in the system. Foods rich in lime are milk, cheese, leafy vegetables, oranges.

Why Let Yourself Get Constipated?

Why endure those dull headache days due to constipation, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can avoid both by getting at the cause of the trouble? If your constipation, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, the better way is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy toasted breakfast cereal is the ounce of prevention that's worth a pound of emergency relief. It helps you not only to get regular but to keep regular, day after day and month after month, by the pleasant means you ever knew. CHAPTER XXVIII—Continued

There was little sleep for Lynn that night. In the morning she read the letter again. It seemed incredible to her that Rene meant what he said. She was tempted to cable him. But what could she say?

The next morning Lynn went to Mortimer's office. After a long wait, she was finally ushered into Mortimer's office. She smiled a little as she thought of her first visit there.

Mortimer greeted her cordially. She took his breath away, she was so much lovelier than he remembered her. Lynn was a far cry from the shy, terrified girl who had come into his office a year and a half ago.

"What can I do for you, Miss Morrow?"

Lynn found it hard to begin. "You've probably wondered how I got North after that Florida episode?"

Mortimer's face was a blank. She probably wanted more money. This time it would really be expensive. He speculated on how much her Fall suit had cost.

Haltingly, she began the pitiful little story. It took her a long time, and Mortimer had to ask many questions. She took out the crumpled marriage license from her bag and gave it to him.

"I sounds so preposterous as I tell it," she said appealingly.

"I hear much stranger stories than this. Your problem is simple. You want me to start an annulment suit. That is what you want." He cleared his throat. "There will be some publicity connected with this. Boucher is a pretty important person these days, and you're well known."

"I'm prepared to face that. There is nothing we can do about it."

Mortimer nodded. "I want to ask you what your fee will be?"

Mortimer smiled. "We won't even talk about that, Miss Morrow." He paused and weighed his words. "Some time pretty soon I may ask you to help me. All I ask is that you comply when I appeal to you."

"I don't understand."

"Just forget what I said for the moment. I'll start the annulment suit immediately. Let me have your address. Good. Now don't worry. I'll keep this here," he said, holding up the license which had caused Lynn so much trouble. "I want to warn you, it will take several months."

That was the last she heard from Mortimer for several days. She had one letter from him suggesting to go to Rene if she could leave here. That was impossible, however. Then one afternoon as she left Wellington's studio she noticed the afternoon newspapers at the subway stop. A big photograph of herself was spread over the front page, a picture of Rene as he left for Europe, and one of Wild.

Lynn had known there would be publicity when Mortimer filed that suit, but she had not realized quite how bad it would be. When she got off the bus near her apartment she bought all the afternoon papers and took them home. She forced herself to read them, clipped the stories and pictures. Then she put them into an envelope and wrote to Rene: "I'm sorry. It was hard to write that letter. Mr. Mortimer warns me it will take a long time. I wish I could rush it through for you, but it is impossible for me to leave town right now. Wellington has a contract which keeps me here. I wish you every happiness."

She sealed it, put stamps on it and went down and dropped it into the letter box on the corner.

Terry had asked to take her to dinner that night, and she tried to reach him on the telephone while she was out. She felt she could not face anybody tonight. But she failed. He was not at his office or his club.

When he came at 7 o'clock, he had a newspaper in his hand and he was excited, anxious to hear all about everything.

"Why didn't you tell me?" he demanded. "Not that it matters to me." He waved the paper at her accusingly.

"I didn't tell anybody."

"Not even Wild?"

"He knew," was all Lynn said and by her tone she halted any more questions. "I can't go out to dinner tonight. I couldn't."

"Nonsense!" Terry was firm. "Of course, you're going!"

"It might mean publicity for you."

"I don't care."

"I do. I hate people staring and questioning and gossiping."

"They'll gossip anyway. Be glad you're important enough to make front page! Get your hat on."

He insisted and as Lynn put on her hat, Terry offered a little advice:

"You're going places, Lynn. You've got to get used to all this. Besides, nothing's so dead as last week's headlines. It's all over now." Lynn shook her head dubiously. Suppose somebody should find out about that marriage, the circumstances surrounding it!

"Keep your chin up!" Terry patted her shoulders as they went out the door. "You're not the first girl who ever got married and made a mess of it. I always wondered why you tolerated that grump, Rene!"

CHAPTER XXIX

It turned out that both Terry and Lynn were right. Reporters sought Lynn out, but she said little. Then somebody dug up that old portrait which Rene had painted for the Lu Lu garage mechanic. Lynn hid away and refused to go even to Wellington's studio. She lost weight, mooned about.

But suddenly she realized what Terry had said was so. It was an old story. People forget so easily. There was a trunk murder to take front page. Lynn was forgotten. Marty found her on the third day after the "garage picture" story, huddled in her darkened studio. He pounded until she opened the door in self-defense.

"How's Beautiful?" he demanded as he came in breezily. He pretended not to see her tragic face. "And Wellington's wild. What's the idea?" Lynn did not attempt to explain. "Get into your glad rags, we're eating."

Lynn was defenseless before Marty's determination. She went with him. He marched her into the smartest mid-town restaurant he could think of.

"Take your medicine. It will be over quick. Then you can go on where you left off," he said as the waiter took them to a conspicuous table. Then the waiter paused solicitously, waiting for their order.

"You look half starved. Steaks, that thick!" Marty said with a wave of the hand.

"You're always feeding me in crises," Lynn said with a little laugh.

"That's all you let me do, kid." Marty's voice was light, but his eyes belied his words. "You're such a babe in the woods, Lynn."

Lynn shuddered inwardly under the scores of interested eyes turned toward them. Then across the room she saw Chuck Austin dining with a man whom Lynn did not know.

"Oh!" she gasped aloud. Chuck had seen her, was bowing. He got up and came over to her table. It was the first time she had ever seen him since that February morning when Wild had sailed.

"How are you, Lynn?" he said. "May I stop a moment?"

Marty ordered a highball for their guest. Lynn's heart was beating to suffocation. Her lips trembled so she could not answer, only try to smile.

"Sorry about all your difficulties, Lynn." His voice was quite sincere. "But maybe some day it will be for the best. I think you're going places. You'll turn up in Hollywood one of these days."

"Thanks."

Neither of them mentioned the thing foremost in both their minds. If only he'd give her some news of Wild!

Then their steaks came, and Marty turned the talk to business.

"I keep thinking of Hollywood for you, Lynn. You're the type, and you can act. You've grown up in the last few months."

"Yes," Lynn shook her head. "And it is not very pleasant."

"It's the business of living."

"But I'm not interested in Hollywood."

"You can't go on like this. You can't model all your life. You're capable of great things." Lynn seemed to find the idea amusing.

"I mean it, Lynn. Wild isn't worth ruining your life over. He's a good guy but a playboy. It was bound to end one way or another. You'd never have been happy with him. He's just the first man you ever fell in love with. Some day you'll look back and think how funny you were with all your moaning and weeping!"

Lynn's face was deadly serious. "I wish I could believe you, Marty." There were sudden tears in her eyes.

One cold November day while Wellington was hard at work his studio telephone rang. It was for Lynn. Sometimes Marty called her there if he had a commission for her. But it was Chuck. He wanted to have dinner with her. When she came back and stepped on to the model's stand again Wellington watched her face.

"Now that's the expression I've been trying to get, Lynn. You've been sort of dead. Come on, turn on that smile and keep it!"

She looked forward to the evening eagerly. Just to be with Wild's brother was comforting.

When Chuck called for her at 7 o'clock he seemed blue and discouraged. He seemed ill at ease. Before they'd finished their soup Lynn knew he would not mention Wild. She could see that determination in his eyes. There was a restraint between them. Chuck tried to talk about his own troubles but he could not.

Finally Chuck gave up, took Lynn home early, and when she asked him to stop and smoke a cigarette, he said he wanted to get home early. His eyes pleaded for understanding, and Lynn did understand. It was no use. They could not be friends. It was too difficult. When Chuck left he did not ask if he could see her again.

Alone in her apartment Lynn sat down at the window for a long time. Somehow she'd always counted on Chuck. It was foolish, after all. Wild was his brother. That night Lynn finally and irrevocably renounced Wild. She would never see him again. Or if she did it would not matter. She must face facts. She had not done that before. It was over!

And that night when Lynn dropped off to sleep, there were no tears on her pillow. She accepted the inevitable.

In the middle of the month, Lynn was ill for a few days with a bad cold, but she managed to work through in spite of her red nose which so infuriated Wellington.

Terry, the faithful, was still on hand. He called for her at 6 at Wellington's studio one night without phoning, but she was too ill to go out. He insisted on seeing her to her apartment. Lynn's head ached horribly, and she wished fervently that Terry would go.

He seemed much preoccupied, and finally he said: "Lynn, I've been wanting to say this for a long time. Will you marry me?" He stood before her, embarrassed and yet determined as he watched her with hot eyes. For a moment Lynn thought she was delirious from the fever which burned in her.

"You aren't serious, Terry."

"I am." He set his chin firmly. "There'll be a hell of a row at home, but we can face it."

Lynn put her hand to her aching head. "For one thing I'm not in the marriage market, yet, you know, I'm a married woman."

"Well, you won't be long. That doesn't mean anything. Will you, Lynn?"

She tried to make him understand, but he refused to take her "no."

"You think it over. You need somebody to take care of you, Lynn. The family can't cut me off. I've got some money of my own, anyway. If they do, they can just cut it!"

Lynn sighed. Why hadn't she fallen in love with this amiable Irishman instead of Wild? She was desperately lonely. His devotion was pleasant, and they'd had some happy times together.

"I'm not in love with you," Lynn finally protested. Terry's face fell.

"You would be, if you were married to me. I know it! I appreciate you. I wouldn't walk off and leave you. Not in a million years, if I thought I had a chance!"

Lynn was white. She knew he spoke the truth. Terry was so different from Wild.

Wellington decided to knock off work for two weeks before Christmas, and Lynn looked forward to the vacation. Then Mme. Reanoud wanted her back for the holidays, and reluctantly Lynn went. She felt she owed Madam a lot. Besides with the approach of the holiday season Lynn's loneliness increased. She was glad to be back with the girls she knew.

On the second day Lynn was back in the shop, Madam came in late from luncheon. She threw the afternoon paper down on the table of the fitting room where she found Lynn: "The Austins keep breaking into print, Kid. Lucky you didn't hitch up with that family. They're all crazy!"

With apprehension Lynn picked up the paper. There were black headlines about Chuck Austin's fight for the custody of Charles Talbott Austin, 3d. There in the fitting room Lynn stared a long time at the photograph on the front page. It was a picture of Mrs. Austin and her son, taken two years previously. Lynn's knees were weak. She leaned against the gray, painted wall of the little room as she stared.

The woman was Helen Warren. The child was Buddy.

CHAPTER XXX

While Lynn stood there, one of the girls came to tell her she was wanted on the telephone. It was Mortimer.

"Can you drop into my office after you get through work?" he asked. Lynn promised.

"I wanted to be sure and see you tonight, Miss Morrow," he said. She sat down in a chair.

"Tell me what it all means?" she demanded, tapping the late afternoon paper on his desk. "I'm simply flabbergasted."

"You were?" Mortimer looked long at her.

"I've a confession to make. I thought when you started going around with young Austin that you knew."

"Knew? I never was so surprised in my life! I still can't believe it!" Mortimer cleared his throat, trying to think just how to begin.

"I've got a lot of things to say to you, Miss Morrow. In the first place, you know, we'll be forced to call you as a witness."

"Witness!" Lynn's face blanched. "Oh, I couldn't! It would be too terrible, especially since I knew Mr. Austin. I know both of them!"

Lynn jumped up and leaned across the desk. "You mustn't ask me, Mr. Mortimer!"

"Miss Morrow, I want to be honest. You realize the Austins have a lot of money. They'll move heaven and earth to get that grandchild! This is not a question even of duty. It is a matter of human decency. You can't see an injustice done. You know Helen Austin! You know she adores that child of hers! Do you want to see him taken away from her?"

THE MESSAGE OF JOHN THE BAPTIST

LESSON TEXT—Luke 3:3, 8-17, 21, 22.
GOLDEN TEXT—Bring forth, therefore, fruits worthy of repentance.—Luke 3:8.

Four centuries of silence! God made a loving appeal to His people through Malachi, the prophet (see lesson of June 23), but they failed to respond, and for about 400 years no prophet had appeared with an authoritative message from God. But now "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets" was ready in the "last days" to speak by "his Son" (Heb. 1:12).

Before the Lord should come, however, the prophet Isaiah (40:3-5) had declared that a voice was to come out of the wilderness to cry, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord." The great honor of that ministry did not fall upon the religious or political leaders mentioned in Luke 3:1, but "the word of God came unto John . . . in the wilderness." When God calls a preacher, something vital and interesting is about to happen.

I. The Preacher—His Call and Character.

It is significant that the call of God for this ministry passed by the mighty of Rome, which was politically powerful, holding sway over the world of its day. It is doubly significant that it passed by Jerusalem, the religious center of the Jewish nation. God was not looking for influence, prestige, or position. He was looking for a man, and He found him, though He had to seek him in the wilderness. Where is God's man for our day?

The character of John is revealed to us by Scripture as unique and rugged. He was a striking figure as he came suddenly out of the wilderness, but the outstanding qualification of John was that he was humble and obedient to God's will. Upon such a man the power of God may fall in all its fullness.

II. His Message—Its Nature and the Reaction (vv. 3, 8-14).

Repentance, as evidenced by baptism, this was John's word to his day. He did not grant them absolution from their sins, but in repentance they were to look forward to the cleansing from sin by the washing of the blood of Christ who was to come. John was the forerunner of Christ. His message of repentance was a preparation for the coming message of redemption.

The reaction of the people is expressed in the question, "What must we do?" Much more would be accomplished for Christ in our day if that were the response of people to the preaching of the truth. Instead of criticizing or condemning the preacher, or the sermon, let us ask, "What shall I do about it?" and then let us do it.

The answer of John was that each one should, by his works, show the reality of his repentance in the details of his daily work and life. Of course, the all-important thing is that a man should believe in Christ, and by faith receive Him as Saviour, but that faith must show itself in daily living or it is meaningless, and, in fact, nonexistent. The world is full of those who need to answer our Lord's own question, "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Luke 6:46).

III. His Ministry to Jesus—the Baptism and Heavenly Response (vv. 15-17, 21, 22).

The forthright honesty and the humility of John appeared in his immediate correction of the people's mistaken idea that he was the Christ. He made clear that his baptism with water, indicating their change of mind concerning sin, would only have real meaning as the coming One—His Lord and ours—would change their natures by the baptism of fire and of the Spirit.

Jesus, who knew no sin of which to repent, took the place of a penitent sinner and was baptized by John. Thus He, the sinless One, entered upon His public ministry and His work of redemption by taking the place of fallen humanity. What infinite grace and condescension!

As He prayed, the heavens opened and the Holy Spirit, taking the form of the gentle dove, rested upon Him. God the Father spoke forth heaven's estimate of our Saviour; He was declared to be the "beloved Son" of God, in whom the Father was "well pleased."

This attestation of His divinity and recognition of His spotless life and character was for Him, but not for Him alone. It speaks to us, even as it has spoken to all men through the centuries, of the One who is Saviour and Lord. "He is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them. For such an high priest became us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens" (Heb. 7:25, 26).

HOW to SEW

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

ONE day there came a letter with a rough sketch of the old rocker at the upper right. The last line of the letter said, "I will remove the rockers if you say so, redesign this rocker along simple lines? Cover it with plain rep in a nice shade of blue perhaps, and give it a matching foot stool and a hem stitched linen chair set all tricked out in tassels?

Here is the result of that idea and the diagram shows all the steps that led up to it. Almost any old chair may be transformed with a slip cover if a little work is done first to build out or to saw off projections. Padding is also important, and open spaces under arms may be covered by stretching the padding tightly and tacking, as shown here.

NOTE: Directions for making the footstool are in Sewing Book 3. The hem-stitched chair set is in Book 4. All the steps in fitting and making slip covers are illustrated in Book 1. The regular meeting of the Tinley Park P. T. A. was held on the evening of October 4th, and all those who attended enjoyed it very much.

The speaker, Mrs. Edward Jackson of Chicago, and long active in the State P. T. A. just radiated the interest and love she had for the Parent Teacher work. She had an apt supply of little poems that illustrated her theme, which I think would be "The Interest of Active Participation in P. T. A. Work." Those who were absent missed a great speech.

A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Fulton, Mr. Steinhagen and the ladies who were instrumental in procuring two men to patrol the crossings in cooperation with the patrol boys.

Keep in mind our next regular meeting on Nov 1st and plan to attend.

The Odako Camp Fire Girls met Tuesday evening after school at the home of their guardian, Mrs. Una Oulman's. Nearly all members was present, hereafter the meeting will be at the regular time on Thursday. Th next meeting will be on Thursday, Oct. 24. Please be present, as often as possible, that is the only way to grow in Camp-fire; so please come out, every member. Much to our regret, Joy Berg resigned her office, as president, because she is in High School at Harvey, and is unable to be at the meeting in time to conduct the business meeting—so Mary Jane Cosonoe was elected president to fill Joy's office. They are planning a Halloween Party and a luncheon for the mothers on Oct. 31. We are hoping every mother and girl will be present on that date. Marie Eichelberg has purchased a Camp-Fire Girl's complete outfit, which pleases us all—may more of the girls catch this spirit and get theirs, as fast as possible.

Mrs. Bartholomew has kindly consented to care for the Blue Birds until February, when they will be turned over to Norma. Gene Hardinger, Mrs. Bartholomew, Mrs. Tolan and Mrs. Una Oulman attended the Guardian's School in Chicago on Tuesday evening. Much comes from this training—may more mothers attend.

Floyd Sarber was in an auto accident, Monday evening. He had several stitches taken in the wound in his head. A tire blew out and he was forced into hitting another car, in which a man and woman were traveling. The woman was slightly injured. Floyd was taken to the Harvey Hospital, but was able to be brought to his mother's home on Wednesday.

The Garden Dept. of Women's Club met at the home of Mrs. Charles Crist Wednesday, October 16th. Twelve were present.

Mrs. Crist read articles on Terrenias and Dish Gardens and exhibited two Mexican Dish Gardens, a vegetable and miniature duck dish garden and several unusual potted plant arrangements.

Tea was served from a table with an arrangement of gourds and Chinese lanterns. Mrs. John Swisher poured the tea.

Tinley Park Woman's Club Citizenship day will be open to the public. Surrounding Clubs of the Federation—a hearty welcome is extended. 10:30 A. M., "What Patriotism Means to Me," by an 8th Grade Pupil, A Club Mother, A Professional Woman, A Minister. At 2 P. M., "Instructions in Balloting and Elections" by Mr. Thos. Bagan, assistant State Attorney. 8 P. M.—Evening Session, Trial by Jury, Judge Frances Harper assisted by Attorney Wm. Aitchison of Blue Island, Attorney Rose Brown of Tinley Park.

Meetings held in School Auditorium, special guests will be district chairman—Mrs. Rose Brown is the Club's Chairman also Mrs. Schell-hase and Mrs. Freitag.

Reception and tea will be served following afternoon session to greet guests, friends, and new members.

Hostesses are Mrs. DeVal, Cross Curlin, Eichelberg and Mr. J. C. Funk.

H

Loughran Reveals Facts In Vote Fraud Cases

Monday evening over radio station W.C.L.S. Mr. Loughran asked Mr. Burke why he discriminated along party lines in the so called vote fraud cases in which he gained so much publicity from the Joliet

Herald News.

Cites Lockport Case

Mr. Loughran then cited the Lockport election fraud case which involved the office of Supervisor of the Township of Lockport. This was a case in which Mr. Wierschem, a democrat, was declared the winner when the votes were counted, but his Republican opponent started a recount which gave the election to the Republican candidate. The Democratic candidate appealed this decision to the Supreme Court of Illinois and this high tribunal reversed the lower courts decision and declared Wierschem the Democratic candidate, the duly elected supervisor.

Cites Supreme Court

Mr. Loughran cited the supreme court decision showing that there had been such gross fraud committed by persons who had the ballots in their possession for several hours after the votes were counted and that the said persons so marked 24 ballots that the supreme court ruled that these ballots should be disregarded and the original canvas of the votes earlier in the evening be held legal, thereby giving Mr. Wierschem the office of supervisor.

Writes Burke Letter

Mr. Loughran quoted a letter sent to Mr. Burke by Mr. Wierschem, which is as follows: "The Hon. States Attorney, James E. Burke, Will County Court House, Joliet, Illinois.

My dear States Attorney:

In view of the decision of the Supreme Court over-ruling the Will County Courts decision, in the election contest in Anderson vs. Wierschem for the office of Supervisor of Lockport Township. The Supreme Courts decision, would indicate, that in the election held in April, 1939, that there was gross fraud committed, and with this in mind, I am asking that you have the persons who committed this fraud indicted by the Grand Jury at the very earliest date. You have done good work in the June 1939 election contest meaning the one where only democrats were involved) now lets continue to keep up this good work so that the people in general will know that when candidates are running for office that they will be protected from fraud at the polls by our states attorney. Your immediate attention is therefore desired to take some action in this case.

Very truly yours,

Signed

Sylvester Wierschem, Supervisor."

Cowing Get Letter

Mr. Loughran then read a letter that Mr. Wierschem sent to the Hon. Judge Cowing, Judge of the County Court. Letter is as follows:

Hon. Glen Cowing, County Judge, Will County Court House, Joliet, Illinois.

Dear Judge Cowing:

In view of the recent action of the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois, on appeal in declaring me the duly elected Supervisor of Lockport Township, and its pertinent comment with reference the conduct of the Republican election judges of the 4th precinct. I deem it my duty to inform you that in the interest of safe elections, you are urged to remove these two men as judges of election and to appoint in their places two competent and honest republicans to serve as judges of election.

Very truly yours,

Signed,

Sylvester Wierschem, Supervisor."

Cowing Acts

The honorable Judge Cowing upon receipt of Mr. Wierschem's letter immediately removed these two election officials, regardless of party affiliations, thereby honestly doing his duty as a public official.

Contrast Burke, Cowing

Mr. Loughran then contrasted Mr. Burke's conduct in this case, with the action taken by the Hon. Judge Cowing in safeguarding the sanctity of the ballot box and insuring honest elections.

Mr. Loughran asked Mr. Burke why he refused to act upon the request of Mr. Wierschem? Mr. Burke, you promised vigorously to prosecute all perpetrators of election frauds, regardless of party or political affiliations. But this is another of your broken promises. I have been informed by Mr. Wierschem, that he never received any reply in answer to his letter, he, therefore, concluded that perhaps he could get some results if he contacted you personally. After many attempts to see you in your office, he finally met you on the street. Mr. Wierschem at that time, asked you to take some action in this case, but you told him you could do nothing about it. He then asked you why? You replied, that you did not have the time. Let me say to you, Mr. Burke, without fear of contradiction, you have spent more time away from your office during office hours, than all the previous state attorneys combined.

Ignored Complaint

Mr. Loughran further questioned Mr. Burke, as follows: "Mr. Burke, as a man sworn to enforce the laws impartially, and sworn to do your duty, regardless of party or politics, you threw this election fraud complaint in the waste basket.

True, you have convicted in the election fraud cases, vote repeaters, but these two judges were sworn election officials. Election judges are men and women sworn in uphold the law in their respective election district and pledged to see that the votes are honestly counted. Let me say in this connection that our election officials, judges and clerks, are men and women of integrity and deserving of the confidence reposed in them. Why, Mr. Burke, as states attorney of Will County did you allow election officials who are duty bound under oath, to honestly count the ballots, escape prosecution?"

As to Burke's Alibi

Mr. Loughran asked Mr. Burke as to his alibi of not having the time to present these cases to the Grand Jury, what his three assistant states attorneys were doing all this time.

Mr. Loughran ended his radio talk by stating that he started his campaign at an early date in order to give Mr. Burke ample time in which to answer any charges that he made against his record or his conduct in office. To date Loughran says, Burke has failed to answer. He earnestly asked all citizens who are interested in good government to give him their continued co-operation and support throughout this campaign, so that they may know all the facts.

Are You Willing To Learn The Truth?

Then Read This Carefully
$500.00

Will be paid to the person who can prove that the following statements were not published:

Under date of Thursday, October 10th, 1940 there appeared in the CRETE RECORD the following statement that was made by Mr. Burke, present states attorney: Here is said article in part: "BURKE ERADICATED SLOT MACHINES. Burke further stated that slot machines had INFESTED this county to the extent that they APPEARED in every part of it. Burke also stated that RECOGNIZING this EVIL, HE UNDER DATE OF APRIL 29th, 1938 issued an ultimatum to all business establishments that these machines (meaning one-arm bandits) must be moved by the MONDAY MORNING FOLLOWING.

NOW READ THE TRUTH

Here is an article that appeared in the CHICAGO TRIBUNE UNDER DATE OF SUNDAY, JULY 28, 1940:

Joliet, Illinois (Legal friend of the people)

1. Are slot machines, horse machines, pin ball and other gambling machines, found in saloons, taverns and roadhouses legal?
2. If they are legal, is there an age limit as to who can play them?
3. I have a seventeen year old boy who has a small job who puts practically all of his earnings in these machines and I can't seem to do anything about it.
4. If there is anything that I can do to help my family from throwing away their money, I would appreciate it very much if you will advise me through your column. Signed P. M.

Note: Mr. Burke said he issued his ultimatum on April 29th, 1938. Mr. Burke took his oath of office on the first Monday in DECEMBER 1936. Why did not Mr. Burke act during the first Monday in DECEMBER of 1936 until APRIL 29th, 1938?

You will also note that the letter sent to Chicago TRIBUNE was published on JULY 28th, OVER (2) YEARS AFTER HE SAID HE ISSUED HIS WARNING to remove the slot machines. This statement made by Burke also appeared in the LOCKPORT HERALD under date of Friday, October 11th, 1940.

AFTER READING THE TRUTH WHAT DO YOU THINK OF MR. BURKE'S STATEMENT?

THE PROOF THAT SLOT MACHINES ARE STILL OPERATING IN WILL COUNTY, WILL BE FOUND ON PAGE 4 OF THE JOLIET HERALD NEWS, MONDAY, OCTOBER 14th, 1940.

ARE YOU GOING TO LET HIM FOOL YOU AGAIN ?

Tune in W.C.L.S. every Monday and Thursday nite at 6:45 P. M. "Hear Mr. Loughran discuss the issues of this campaign!"

Signed: FRANCIS J. LOUGHRAN.

Burke's Stops Slot Machine Racket

Mr. Burke stated that slot machines had infested this county to the extent that they appeared in every part of it. He added that these instruments were being patronized by our youth and by those who could least afford to play them. All with the result that our youth was being corrupted by participating in gambling, and families were suffering deprivation because the unfortunate wage-earner had become their victim.

Mr. Burke stated that recognizing this evil, he, under the date of April 29th, 1938, issued an ultimatum to all business establishments and persons in Will County, and the same appeared in the public press of that date, that slot machines were to be removed from all premises and places of business by the Monday morning following. This was the death toll of the slot machine racket in Will County. Since that date in 1938, all have complied instances during the past summer months when it came to Mr. Burke's attention that a few persons had them secreted in some adjoining room. However, by persistent and constant effort, Mr. Burke finally succeeded in eradicating the menace of the slot machines in Will County, much to the gratification of the good decent people of this community.

Has Insured Honest Elections

Mr. Burke further added that he has preserved the sanctity of the ballot box, and that our citizenry need not be further disturbed by the perpetration of election frauds in the future. He stated that for some time, groups in our community had, in the past, endeavored to affect the results of our elections by casting and having cast illegal votes. He added that, fortunately, by vigorous and successful prosecution of election fraud cases, every good American citizen can too, regardless of politics, cast his or her ballot knowing that it will be honestly counted and it will not be nullified by the illegal vote of some hoodlum imported from another county.

Subdued Vice

Mr. Burke said that, while his duties primarily consist in the prosecution of cases and not in bringing about arrests and that the State's Attorney is a prosecuting officer as distinguished from an arresting one, yet, he has frequently had his office devote therefrom, by personally conducting raids throughout this county with the result that vice and gambling have been subdued.

Mr. Burke added that it is upon this record, coupled with the splendid conditions which we find in this county that he presents his candidacy for reelection to the office of State's Attorney. He added that he will appear personally at various meetings throughout the county and also that he will speak over the radio where his entire record shall be given clearly and impartially to the voters of this county.

Cook County Has Surplus Cash

Frank Lyman, Clerk of the Probate Court, in a statement issued today, said that his office has turned over to the Cook County Board a surplus of $72,724.25 over the annual appropriation made for operation of the office, and called this in effect a dividend to the taxpayers.

This figure, Lyman said, is based on collections for the first ten months of the fiscal year. The surplus will be increased by more than $50,000 during the final two months.

New Dealers Play Football

Like a rookie in the big league Wendell Willkie has booted a few, and the opposition bleachers have been giving him the Bronx cheer, led by Boss Flynn of the noble professionals who would do it, oh, so much better!

But in Willkie's case the boots are not all loss. They prove beyond the peradventure of a doubt that he is NOT a politician. And a lot of folks are fed up with politicians. That is proved by the immense popularity of the movie film, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington", the young Senator who did everything wrong except to be false to himself.

The opposition, in the person of Henry Agard Wallace, ex-Republican, begins to fall over its own big feet. I refer to his acceptance speech in which he implied that everybody who votes for Willkie is a Hitler stooge, even if he is too dumb to know it. And "the Roosevelts" telephoned "the Wallaces" that it was marvelous oratory.

That sort of hitting below the belt has been tried before. President Wilson in 1918 asked that only Democrats be sent to Congress. The inference was that he could not count on the loyalty of non-Democrats, and the folks didn't like it. The House went Republican and out here in the corn belt it went a-roaring. The referee declared that Wilson lost on a foul.

With Henry calling the signals the New Dealers are now questioning Willkie's loyalty because his grandparents were Germans. If that sort of smear goes for Willkie, it goes for every American who has a German grandfather or mother. And if I know my political onions that is not a bush league error. It is a big time boot.

Why did our noble Wallace mention Hitler's name 23 times and Stalin's name not once? And why is it that it is only when Hitler commits an atrocity that the alarm bells ring in Washington? The answer is plain to everyone who thinks; first, the Communists have greater influence in Washington than the Bund; and, second, the natural revulsion against Nazi tyranny is being played to win certain votes in a domestic election. But Stalin has butchered his millions. And who of the great hearts who ha' w? Wallace bled complain about the Nero of the Kremlin? It is a pretty sleazy business.

The 30,000,000 Americans of German ancestry are not going to like these innuendoes against their patriotism. Their loyalty was demonstrated during the World War when Wendall Willkie and other grandsons of Germans volunteered for overseas service.

Willkie's grandparents came to this country when Carl Schurz came. Schurz was a good enough American to be a member of the convention in 1860 which nominated Abraham Lincoln, was Major General at Gettysburg, Minister to Spain, U. S. Senator, Member of the Cabinet, and later, because he had to be true to his convictions, a supporter of Cleveland.

The Carl Schurz Memorial Foundation has just issued a statement. No Bund of a few thousand disloyal men can discount it. It declares that "in the rise of the Nazi power we have seen the progressives suppression of the old cultures in the German Fatherland through courses which have been humiliating to every American with German blood in his veins."

And then they quote what Carl Schurz said on his 70th birthday, March 2, 1899:

"Nor can I fail to speak with pride of those American citizens of German blood who hold their rank among the best of our people by their industry, their civic virtues, their conservative spirit and their self-sacrificing patriotism which has drenched every American battlefield with Teutonic blood."

"It may well be said of them that, however warm their affection for their native land, they have never permitted that affection to interfere with their duties as American citizens, and least of all, to seduce them into any design or desire to use their power in American politics for foreign ends."

If I were Henry Agard Wallace or Boss Flynn I would go mighty slow in smearing an American simply because his grandfather was born east of France. I am dead certain that Jim Farley wouldn't stand for it ten seconds, if he were managing the team. Which he is not.

No, Willkie has not made the only blunders. There was the stab-in-the-back speech also — another excellent example of how not to run a campaign.

If this sort of stuff had been a rookie's bungle I would say little about it. But the professionals in the New Deal are drunk with power. This smearing of a loyal American and millions of his fellow citizens who made the same choice of grandfathers, shows signs of whispering its way all through this campaign. It began before Willkie was nominated and it is to the

ROEHLER 'DERBY'

In the third district, Illinois they're calling the congressional race the "Roehler Derby." Waldemar J. Roehler, Republican nominee, his friends say, has demonstrated he has the staying qualities of a marathon performer. He is canvassing the big district from 51st street to the county line, addressing civic groups and regular organization meetings, day and night.

In all his talks young Roehler drives home the necessity for real, full-time representation in Congress and promises that if he is sent to Washington he will keep his ears cocked to the voice of the people back home, and not to the White House.

A good mayn s doupoilleltaiETA A good many sound political prophets are saying that the third congressional district is going to send a Republican to aWashington on November 5.

Republicans Claim Clean Campaign

As the campaign which will culminate in the state and national election on November 5th roars on toward its peak, voters are beginning to evaluate the characteristics of various candidates by the manner in which they have conducted their campaigns up to the present time, and by their statements, broadcast by press and radio and from to political platforms on which they have appeared, and in this connection it is interesting to note that Dwight H. Green, Republican candidate for governor, has attracted hosts of friends to his candidacy on account of the fine, clean, straightforward campaign which he has conducted up to the present time.

Like Wendell Willkie, candidate for president, Green is not a politician, but he has a way of impressing people with his sincerity of purpose, and he has never left an audience in doubt as to his purpose in case he is elected governor of Illinois.

Cartwheel Boxes

Hat brims mushroomed out to such proportions this year they outgrew their boxes so a smart manufacturer thought up the cartwheel box. This one has top and bottom of chintz treated with koroseal to make it dust proof, moisture proof, mildew proof and cleanable with soap and water. Coat hangers and various utility boxes may be had in matching chintz.

Mrs. Leonard Anderson

Mr. and Mrs. William Fitzer announce the marriage of their daughter, Jean Elaine, to Robert James McCleary, son of Mrs. Lillian McCleary. The ceremony was performed September 1, at 6 o'clock, in St. John's Methodist Episcopal church, at Clinton, Iowa, with the Rev. Frank Horton, officiating.

The couple was attended by Miss Dorothy McCleary, sister of the bridegroom, and Donald Lorber, of Davenport, Iowa, cousin of the bridegroom.

The bride wore a street length dress of black sheer crepe, with black and white accessories, and a corsage of gardenias. The maid of honor wore black sheer crepe, with black and white accessories, and a corsage of white gladiola and tube roses.

Following the ceremony, a wedding dinner was served, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Lorber, 1817 W. 5th street in Davenport, Iowa, aunt and uncle of Mr. McCleary. Pink and white were used in the table appointments, while a large wedding cake made up the centerpiece.

Novel games were played thru-out the evening hours, and prizes were awarded to: Miss Grace Blaauw, of Plainfield, and Miss Wilma Paulson, who in turn presented them to the honored guest, who also received a guest prize, and a pink and white gladiola corsage from the hostess.

A luncheon was served at one large table decorated with pink and white bows decorating either end of the tables and pink and white tapers.

The shower was also in the form of an Announcement Party, in which small white linen cards, on which was written the announcement of the marriage was at each place.

Following the luncheon the bride was presented many lovely gifts.

To Bring Republican Campaign Into Every Township

Plans were completed today to bring the Republican campaign into every township in the county before the Nov. 5th election day.

In the rural communities, as in the city, A. F. Schupp, county chairman, declared, there is an overwhelming sentiment back toward Republicanism.

This sentiment, he attributed to a knowledge by the average man and woman, that his own best interests will be served by Wendell L. Willkie, a Republican president in the White House, with Dwight H. Green, a Republican governor, in the governor's house in Springfield and with the election of Republican officials generally.

To bring the issues of the campaign squarely before the voters, and inform them about what the Republican party offers the public, these meetings have been scheduled in rural townships. Others will be announced later.

Elwood Town Hall, Oct. 18, 8 p. m.; Wilton Center Com. Hall, Oct. 19, 8 p. m.; Manhattan Grange hall, Oct. 19, 8 p. m.; Elwood Presbyterian church, Oct. 19, 5:30 p. m.; Green Garden Town hall, Oct. 21, 8 p. m.; Lockport Twp. high school, Oct. 22, 8 p. m.; DuPage Congregational church, Oct. 23, 7:30 p. m.; Mokena Hatch hall, Oct. 24, 8 p. m.; New Lenox Emilie hall, Oct. 25, 8 p. m.; Steger Catereria, Oct. 28, 8:00; Beecher Com. hall, Oct. 29, 8:00; Monsee Court hall, Oct. 30, 8:00; Peotone Conrad hall, Oct. 30, 8:00; Peotone Methodist church, Oct. 31, 7:30; and Braidwood Legion hall, Nov. 1, at 8.

Motion pictures defining the issues and graphically portraying the problems that the voters can best solve for the nation by electing Republican candidates will be shown. Local and state candidates have also been scheduled for the meetings.

HOLD FAMILY PARTY FOR MR. AND MRS. J. R. BOWEN

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Bowen of Newton, Iowa arrived in Joliet last week and are visiting with relatives and friends in this vicinity. They are guests of their daughter, Mrs. E. W. Bush. On Sunday an especially delightful family party was arranged in their honor. Mr. Bowen's sister, and family from Milwaukee and his niece from Boston, all met in Joliet for a re-union.

The forenoon was spent visiting at the Bush home and at one o'clock a dinner was served at the Colonial tea room after which the crowd motored out to the home of Mr. Bowen's grand daughter, Mrs. Walter Bridge near Elwood where they spent the afternoon. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Hobson, Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Hobson and daughters Betty and Judy all of Milwaukee, Mrs. Hattie Hobson of Chicago, Mrs. Frank Bernaue from Boston, Mass., Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bridge, Mrs. E. W. Bush and Marilyn Bush.

This week another of Mr. Bowen's daughters, Mrs. H. L. Rust and husband and daughter Janet of Rockford, Michigan are visiting here.

Great American Thirst Booms Beverage Sales

THERE wasn't a famine in the United States this past summer, but the weather certainly brought on the Great American Thirst.

The result was a boom in bottled soft drinks, beer and milk which were supplied at almost every kind of oasis at which thirst could be quenched.

Starting off with a thirsty crowd of 145,000 at the 500-mile race on the Indianapolis Speedway, the season sped swiftly into other momentous events where parched throats were relieved by cool drinks.

Also in Indiana, another huge—and thirsty—assemblage cheered and sipped at the Elwood celebration in honor of Wendell Willkie's acceptance speech. Then there were the Democratic and Republican National conventions, at Chicago and Philadelphia. One big gulp after another.

The coming World's Series baseball games are expected to mark another high peak in bottled drink consumption.

Last year, in 1939, about 90 bottles of soft drinks were consumed for every person in the United States, it was estimated. In 1939 the American public bought more than half a billion dollars worth of soft drinks.

Dealers in refreshments point out that bottled drinks are now popular all the year 'round—not only in hot weather as formerly. Large sales of beverages and other drinks at football games in the Fall, and social and sporting events in the Winter and Spring are held as indicative of the American trend toward bottled drinks as all year products.

Popularity of bottled drinks has led to many innovations in modern packaging.

One of these innovations is a new seven-ounce bottle which is literally "a glass of beer in a bottle."

Introduced in Wisconsin and POPULARITY of bottled soft drinks is increasing yearly as Americans make bottled beverage drinking a year-around habit. Last year about 90 bottles of soft drinks were consumed for every person in the United States and total bill for these beverages was more than $500,000,000. This young lady prefers her drink out of the new tall zombie glasses. Others drink it right out of the bottle.

Michigan during the summer, the seven-ounce bottle is becoming a popular item in hotels and restaurants especially. Its manufacturer points out that its low cost and its economical content are appealing to women especially, who ordinarily drink only one glass of beer at luncheon or dinner in a hotel or restaurant.

The new bottle is short and inconspicuous. It is designed to take up a minimum amount of space in refrigerators.

Even the old-fashioned milk bottle—so popular at summer picnics and social events—has become stylish. The latest in milk bottles is a handy quart bottle that is five ounces lighter than the old-fashioned container and one inch shorter.

AN APPLE A DAY—SERVED IN A DIFFERENT WAY
(See Recipes Below)

Apples hold a place of well-deserved popularity today, for they have been widely used as food from the earliest times. What other fruit has such a long season, tastes so good, keeps so well, can be served in so many different ways, and yet is relatively inexpensive?

Do you want apples for cooking, or for baking? Or do you want them for eating apples or dessert? Apples should be selected according to the purpose for which you are to use them.

A good cooking apple should be tart, or at least medium acid, with a juicy, fine-grained flesh. A good cooking apple, however, should have a distinct apple flavor. You are, no doubt, familiar with such names as Rome Beauty, Winesap, Black Twig, Grimes Golden and McIntosh.

Have you ever had the sad experience of baking apples only to find that they have remained hard and lack juiciness? Or did you use a variety that became so watery upon baking that you couldn't quite tell what it was? The Wealthy, McIntosh, Grimes Golden, Jonathan, Rhode Island Greening or Northwestern Greening, the Rome Beauty, the Winesap and Black Twig are all varieties of apples which may be used for this purpose.

A good dessert apple should have a prominent and distinct apple flavor, mildly acid, and with a fine-flesh texture. Here again you may select the McIntosh, the Grimes Golden, the Jonathan, the Rhode Beauty, the Rome Beauty, the Black Twig, or the Delicious.

A bowl of shining apples will appeal to the children when they come home from school. There will be no need for them to say, "Mom, I'm hungry; what can I have to eat?" The Wealthy, the Delicious, and the Rome Beauty are all popular eating apples.

There is nothing more delicious than a baked apple, apple pie, or a raw apple salad, but have you ever tried apples in fritter batter, or combined them with green peppers for a salad?

Here are some such recipes from my own test kitchen which are not only simple to prepare, but also include that much-longed-for variety in recipes when we have plenty of apples to use.

Norwegian Apple Pudding.

(Serves 8)

1/4 pound prunes (about 9)
2 cups cold water
1 inch cinnamon stick
1 1/2 cups boiling water
1/2 cup cornstarch
1 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 pound apples (about 3) (quartered) (cooked in a syrup of 1/2 cup water and 1/4 cup sugar)
Cover prunes with cold water, bring to a boil, and stew until soft. Remove stones and return the prunes, stick cinnamon and water to kettle. Add boiling water. Slowly stir in thin paste made of cornstarch, sugar, salt and a little cold water. Boil 20 minutes, stirring frequently. Remove cinnamon stick, and add lemon juice and apples. Place in greased molds and chill.

Scalloped Apples de Luxe.

(Serves 6 to 8)

2 1/2 cups graham crackers (about 26) (crushed)
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter (melted)
1 quart apples (6 apples) (sliced)
1/2 cup pineapple juice
1/2 cup marshmallows (quartered)
Combine graham cracker crumbs, sugar, spices, salt and butter. Place half of the crumb mixture in a well-greased 1 1/2 quart casserole. Add half of the sliced apples, moistened with part of the pineapple juice. Cover with the remaining crumbs, and top with apple slices. Pour the remaining juice over all. Bake cov-

Aga Khan, Worth $800,000,000, but Is Strapped, Busted

Indian Potentate, Fabulously Rich, Cannot Make Use of His Wealth.

GENEVA, SWITZERLAND. — Worth $800,000,000—but hard up!

The Aga Khan, reputedly one of the richest men on earth, whose very name stands for wealth, Lucullian luxury and princely prodigality, says he is broke, strapped, flat, not to say busted.

With his charming blonde French wife and seven-year-old son, the fabulously wealthy Indian potentate fled from France to Geneva to escape the Nazi advance and now, unable to get any of his money transferred from banks in London, Paris, Bombay and Cairo, the Aga Khan complains:

"We are almost destitute. What is the use of having money if you can't get it? With strict economy we have enough to live on for a year, but there can be no extravagance."

Of course, the Aga Khan's idea of being destitute differs from that of the average man. It is bound to—in view of the fact that his income, in normal times, runs around $20,000,000 a year. Nevertheless, it is a fact that he has been compelled to sell his famous racing stable for a mere half-million dollars, as well as to cut his usual retinue of servants and attendants in half, bringing it down to a skeleton staff of 20.

Like Being on Relief.

For the Aga Khan, that kind of thing practically amounts to going on relief. However, in the dark moments when he reflects on the dismal state of his financial affairs, the Indian potentate can take comfort in the thought that, as long as the British empire survives, its rulers are not likely to let him starve. This, for the very good reason that, as spiritual chief of 78,000,000 Ismaili Mohammedans, he is an invaluable cog in the complicated machinery of state by which Britain maintains power in India.

Further, Indian Mohammedans are linked by religious sympathy with the Mohammedans of the Near East, where Britain is now fighting a life-and-death battle, and the friendship of the Aga Khan can do a lot toward keeping these wavering brown brothers on Britain's side.

So it can be safely assumed that the Aga Khan's "strict economy" does not mean that his diet will be reduced to the point where the local tailors will have to take a couple of reefs in the waistbands of his ample trousers. If such an untoward thing should happen, it would be a real and special tragedy to the Aga Khan.

His Weight in Gold.

Part of the tribute his Mohammedan followers pay him each year is determined by piling gold bars in a scale until they equal the Khan's weight. This, for the past decade, has never been less than 225 pounds. Thus, even the loss of 10 pounds, would cost him in the neighborhood of $4,000, so it may well be imagined that he looks with apprehension on the prospect of a reduced diet.

Even if he escapes this nightmare, the present situation of the Aga Khan contrasts sadly with the golden days when he was the freest-spending playboy of the Continent.

A man who controls the religious thoughts of 78,000,000 in India alone and of many millions of Moslems in other parts of the Near East is of tremendous importance to Great Britain, as is his son and heir, Prince Ali Khan. Father and son, while aware of their power, have shown no apparent lack of loyalty.

Physicist Says Silver Is Best Water Purifier

PASADENA, CALIF.—Dr. Alexander Goetz predicts that silver eventually may replace chlorine and other germicides in purifying the world's drinking water.

"The metal leaves the water sparkling and with a taste of freshness," said the physicist in describing experiments made by him and his scientist wife, Mrs. Sylvia Goetz, at the California Institute of Technology.

"There is no disagreeable odor as is sometimes noticed in chlorine-treated water," Dr. Goetz said. "Too, all germicides are poisonous and the margin between the point where they will kill germs and where they will become injurious or fatal to persons is five times greater with silver than with chlorine. I doubt if a person could get enough silver to kill him, although a large quantity might turn his skin black."

Avalanche of Bad Luck

Has a Good Side, Too

POSCHIAVO, SWITZERLAND.—Pierre Lardi, 16, of Poschiavo, is alive today only because the avalanche which carried him a quarter of a mile down an Alp near St. Moritz left him buried 10 feet under the snow just in front of an approaching train.

The train crew never saw Lardi, but the train was late and they went to work clearing the track.

They found the youth unconscious but still alive under the snow. He recovered in a St. Moritz hospital where he was found to be bruised but otherwise uninjured.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

A piece of chamois that has been dampened makes an excellent duster. It makes furniture look like new.

Wash sieves with water to which a little bicarbonate of soda has been added. Never use soap when washing sieves.

Any flaked ready-to-serve cereal may be used instead of bread crumbs in a recipe that calls for bread crumbs.

When making baked custard, pour boiling milk onto the beaten eggs. It will then bake very firm.

If you sprinkle a little flour in the grease in which you are to fry eggs, croquettes, etc., the grease will not sputter.

Apples that are to be baked should be pricked with a fork before being placed in the oven. If you do this you will find they will not break while cooking.

Do not move bread dough after it begins to rise, or it is likely to fall. Select a spot, out of a draft, for the bowl. Cover with a cloth and then let the dough alone.
